Foothill College

Do you prefer a more thoughtful, peaceful atmosphere?

Located in the community of Los Altos Hills, near Stanford University and Google’s headquarters, you’ll find Foothill College’s park-like campus. In fact, the American Institute of Architects has twice honored the campus as the “most beautiful community college ever built.” On campus, students will find an award winning Physical Science, Math, and Engineering (PSME) complex, multimedia labs, a library, athletic facilities, two theatres, an observatory, and much more.

“I was really impressed by the availability of professors. One of the reasons why I was academically successful at Foothill was that I was well taught and guided by my teachers. Also, the students here—from a wide variety of cultures and experiences—made my learning experience fun.”
– Daniel Vignon, Transfer to MIT

Do you thrive in a fast-paced environment?

Located in Cupertino, near Apple’s headquarters, the De Anza College campus offers a lively atmosphere, blending Spanish and modern architecture. On campus, students will find unique facilities such as the Cheeseman Environmental Studies Center, Euphrat Museum of Art, television, animation, and film studios, athletic facilities, a library, the Fujitsu Planetarium, and much more. De Anza is also well known for social action and student engagement through initiatives such as the Vasconcellos Institute for Democracy in Action (VIDA).

“De Anza has contributed immeasurably to my success by preparing me for the challenges of a four-year curriculum. I walked through the campus arches with trepidation, but left with renewed hope and admission offers from two Ivy League universities.”
